Thus it is not impossible, or even improbable, that after declining $12,000 the city may be brought to the humil-lation of getting nothing at all—a contingency well worthy a serious reflection from the council. Under the most favorable circumstances, after de fraying all the expenses of litigation, it cannot hope to realize over $15,000 or $14,000, and taking into consideration the dangers of a lawsuit, it is certainly doubtful as to whether the difference between this and the amount tendered as a compromise will justify a resort to the

A significant fact is afforded in the statement which City Attorney Capps made to the council yesterday evening that it was settled beyond a doubt that $10,000 of the defalcation occurred under the o'd bond. If this be true, and it was made after careful investigation on the part of Mr. Capps, the new bondsmen have tendered just twice the sum of their liability. Plainly it is to their interests, under these circumstances to litigate rather than pay even $12,000, unless they care to avoid all the annoying incidents of a law-suit.
